When Will the iPhone 17 Be Released?

Apple traditionally announces new iPhone models in September, and the iPhone 17 is expected to follow this trend. While an exact date has not been officially confirmed yet, many industry experts predict that the iPhone 17 will be unveiled in early September 2025. Pre-orders for the device typically begin shortly after the announcement, often within a few days. The official release in the UAE and other regions is likely to happen a week or two after the announcement, depending on the local supply chain and logistics.

As with previous years, Apple's global launch will be staggered, meaning that some regions may see the iPhone 17 available on store shelves before others. However, the UAE has historically been one of the first regions to get new Apple products, so there's a good chance that the iPhone 17 will be available for purchase shortly after its global launch.

iPhone 17 Availability in the UAE

In the UAE, the availability of new iPhone models has always been a major draw for tech enthusiasts. Apple's retail presence in Dubai, Abu Dhabi, and other major cities in the country ensures that residents and tourists can get access to the latest Apple products quickly. The iPhone 17 will likely be available in Apple Stores across the UAE, including the flagship Apple Store in The Dubai Mall and the store in Mall of the Emirates.

Besides Apple's own stores, major telecom providers in the UAE, such as Etisalat and Du, are expected to offer the iPhone 17 through their own retail outlets, as well as on their online platforms. These carriers will likely offer the phone as part of contract deals, with different pricing options based on data plans and contract lengths.

For those looking to purchase the iPhone 17 outright, it will also be available through authorized resellers and online marketplaces. As always, Apple's online store will offer direct purchases with the option for home delivery, ensuring that customers can get the phone without leaving their homes. Additionally, third-party retailers like Virgin Megastore, Carrefour, and Jumbo Electronics are expected to have the device in stock shortly after its official release.

How Much Will the iPhone 17 Cost in the UAE?

While Apple has not yet revealed official pricing for the iPhone 17, we can expect the price to be in line with previous iPhone models. The base model of the iPhone 17 is likely to start at around AED 4,000, with prices increasing for higher storage variants. Like previous iPhones, the iPhone 17 will come in different storage configurations, and the price will scale up depending on whether you opt for 128GB, 256GB, 512GB, or 1TB models.

It is also likely that the iPhone 17 will be offered in multiple variants, including the standard iPhone 17, iPhone 17 Plus, and iPhone 17 Pro models. The Pro models, which come with more advanced camera systems and better performance, will generally be priced higher, with the iPhone 17 Pro Max likely reaching upwards of AED 6,000 for the highest storage version.

Additionally, the cost of the iPhone 17 in the UAE may be influenced by factors such as import duties and taxes. However, UAE residents benefit from relatively low taxes on electronic goods, which often results in lower prices compared to other regions like Europe or the US.
